Simmons College

1995

300 The Fenway

Boston, Mass.

Since its establishment, Simmons College has been educating women to succeed in the world. Many have passed through the doors of the green-cupola building at 300 The Fenway earning degrees in the Arts, Sciences, and Humanities. What comes with a Simmons education, however, is far more than a certificate of accomplishment.

The Simmons community itself is one of the greatest resources the school has to offer. Simmons encourages women to grow in both their professional and personal lives through the environment that has been created on campus. For most, it is not merely a place to "just take a class"; it is a place to learn about oneself.

Microcosm invites you to take "a closer look" at Simmons College, at the individuals and experiences that make it more than a place to just learn what you can find in a textbook. Take a look at what could be considered "the little things" - the organizations, activities, liaisons, and the professors and written students themselves. These are not things that are on a degree, but are etched indelibly in everyone at Simmons.

A Look At The World Around Us

Boston is a part of everyday life at Simmons. How could it not be? Everyone knows about John Hancock, the Museum of Fine Arts, and Cheers but did you know that...

... the children's book Make Way for Ducklings is set in the historic Public Garden?

... the Institute of Contemporary Art first introduced Picasso to Boston?

... Chinatown's gateway arch was a gift of the people of Taiwan?

...when businessman Peter Faneuil offered to erect a market-house (now known as Faneuil Hall) the idea was nearly outvoted, winning with just 367 to 360 votes?

Right Now...The Class of 1998 is Looking Good!!

Orientation Week '94 gave new students the opportunity to get acquainted with Simmons and Boston through such activities as the President's Reception, Playfair, and the mystery boat cruise.

A Look Back At The Class of 1995

For many seniors it's hard to imagine where the past four years have gone; it seems like only yesterday that they themselves were just beginning here at Simmons College. But time does fly by and along the way members of the class of 1995 formed many friendships and created many memorable experiences that they will look fondly back upon when they think of the time they spent at Simmons.

Here's Looking At You

The Class of 1995 has got "the Look" no matter what season or celebration. Even when caught off-guard they seem to always be up to something wacky or silly and seem like they can make almost anything at Simmons fun!

Simmons's Life

Life at Simmons is as varied as the students are themselves. A glimpse into campus life can show you almost anything from community service to leadership training to travels around the world.

As you step into the Student Activities Office it's hard not to bump into one of the many people running in and out asking such questions as "Do you have a minute?" or "Can I ask you a question?" Once you're inside the office of Robin Sitten, Asst. Director of Student Activities, you'll find a room that suits the hectic atmosphere. The desk and surrounding areas are covered with piles of paperwork and memos. Amid what seems like a million things to be done it's easy to miss the tiny white piece of paper in the corner of her bulletin board. It's a fortune that simply reads "You will make change for the better."

Aside from her usual involvement as the advisor of the Activities Programming Board, Microcosm, Four-Class Council, the Box Office and Mother-Daughter Weekend, Robin has taken on many other responsibilities in the absence of a Director of Student Activities. Going beyond the call of duty, she has been busy conducting the search for a new SAC director, the SAC renovations, organization reactivation, Fall Orientation 1994, and the Leadership Retreat. Robin is also responsible for the development and implementation of the new summer orientation program.

On behalf of the Simmons community, we would like to thank Robin Sitten for her endless dedication. By unselfishly giving up her time and putting all of her effort into her work, Robin has reached out to the students and improved the Simmons community. Robin, you're fortune is right. You have made many changes for the better and we thank you for your hard work and commitment to Simmons College.

The Head of the Charles Regatta

October 23, 1994

On October 23, 1994 as spectators, vendors, and crews lined the banks of the Charles for the 3-mile Head of the Charles Regatta course two boats from Simmons placed in the top ten in their races. One boat was entered in the open eight category and the other in the youth four category.

Domestic Violence Awareness Week

Above: The Jane Doe Walk for Women's Safety had people from all over walking for a good cause.

Above and Below: The hallways of the Main Campus Building became a clothesline for awareness as t-shirts decorated by the victims of domestic violence hung in all areas. The T-shirts served as a reminder of the extent of violence that exists and gave everyone a more personal look of some of the victims.

Domestic Violence Awareness Week, sponsored by the Health Center, reminded everyone of the extent of domestic violence. During the week in October, students put their support for victims into action by participating in the Jane Doe Walk for Women's Safety and the other activities of the week.

Gay And Lesbian Awareness Week

October 14-21, 1994

Above: The entire Simmons community participated in and enjoyed the activities of Gay And Lesbian Awareness (GALA) week. These three are acting silly in Alumnae Hall.

Above: The "Ten Percent Review," in Alumnae Hall, capped off the events of GALA week.

Simmons kicked off its eighth annual Gay And Lesbian Awareness week on October 14, 1994 with an all-campus tea titled "Coming Out, What It's All About," featuring a panel of faculty members and students sharing their experiences. The rest of the week was packed with informative programs such as a discussion titled "Career Issues for Gay, Lesbian, and Bisexual Students" and one with Leslie Feinberg, author of Stone Butch Blues. The week ended with the "Ten Percent Review."

Above: Professor Diane Raymond was a strong supporter of the events and programs of the week.

Mother/Daughter Weekend

November 4-6, 1994

Seniors honored the influential women in their lives during the annual Mother/Daughter Weekend. Chaired by Kassandra Kimbriel and Stephanie Vigue, the Mother/Daughter Committee set as its goal an affordable weekend of events which acknowledged the variety of relationships represented by members of the Senior Class. Guest speakers at the Saturday luncheon represented three generations of Simmons women, from the 40's, 70's, and 90's.

Absolute Arnold

November 19, 1994

On November 19, Alumnae Hall was alive with the sound of music mostly rock, alternative, and rap music, of course, as Arnold Hall sponsored their annual Absolute Arnold. Students from Simmons had the opportunity to meet people from other area colleges and dance the night away listening to the music provided by both a dj and the local cover-band Crust.

January 15-17, 1995 was filled with activities to help second semester transfer students get acquainted with Simmons and the city of Boston. Sponsored by the Transfer Liaison the weekend included a New Students Reception held in Simmons Hall and a performance in Alumnae Hall by Road-kill Buffet, an improv group from MIT.

Valentine's Day Ball

February 11, 1994

The ballroom of the Long Wharf Marriot Hotel was packed with Simmons students and their dates for the annual Valentine's Ball on February 11. The sold-out event gave everyone the chance to dress up and have a blast. While some people danced the night away, others had a good time just being with friends and enjoying the atmosphere of the Long Wharf. No matter how they spent the evening nearly everyone who attended the Ball can agree that the event lived up to, and maybe even exceeded, its expectations.

Father/Daughter Weekend

February 24-26, 1995

Above: Kelly Purcell, Kelly Driscoll, and their guests seem to be enjoying themselves at Quadside. Over the weekend guests got to catch a glimpse of student life at Simmons.

Sophomores and Seniors took part in the tradition of Father/Daughter Weekend on February 24-26. Events ranged from brunch at the President's house to the Father/Daughter Ball, but most importantly the weekend provided students with the chance to spend time with the men who have made an important difference in their lives.

Theatrical Society's Spring Production of

On February 23, 24, 25, and 27, the Simmons College Theatrical Society brought Neil Simon's The Odd Couple to life in Alumnae Hall. The tale of two roommates, as different as day and night, was directed by sophomore Jesslyn Hoeft and Dix Scholar Lisa Andruchow. Senior Lisa Smeester and freshman Nicole St. Clair gave outstanding performances in the lead roles. Nicole's Florence, insanely clean, but ever ditzy, was complemented perfectly by Lisa's down-to-earth (but often sloppy), Olive, showing just how tough living together can be. Anyone who's ever had a roommate appreciated the quirks and sarcasm they brought to the stage. The cast also included Simmons students Sarah Ann K. Teuwen, Elizabeth Lewis, Kathylene Southard and Holly Tuth as the card-playing cohorts of the leads.

World Events

In the past year, the O.J. Simpson saga covered the news, thousands of Cuban refugees set sail for America, and fatal earthquakes wreaked havoc in Japan. Conflict continued in Bosnia and starvation persisted in Rwanda.

Forest fires and floods hit the U.S. Clinton promised Health Care and Welfare Reform. Supreme Court Justice Harry A. Blackmun, famous for writing the Roe v. Wade decision, retired and was replaced by Stephen G. Breyer, a court of appeals judge from Mass.

Heather Whitestone, a deaf 21-year-old, became the first contestant with a disability to win the Miss America Pageant. Upstate New York rocked once gain with the 25th anniversary of Woodstock.

In sports, Italy won the World Cup, soccer's ultimate prize. Michael Jordan tried his hand at baseball in the minor leagues and players' strikes ended the professional baseball season early and kept the hockey season from starting on time.

A Farewell to Carol Leary

Simmons bid a warm farewell to Vice President Carol A. Leary on December 1, 1994 when she left to take on the role of president at Bay Path College in Longmeadow, Massachusetts.

On September 12, 1994 Leary was chosen from a field of seventy-five applicants to fill the role of president in a unanimous vote by the board. Bay Path College is an all women's college of approximately five hundred. Leary has become the school's fifth president and the second woman to preside over Bay Path.

At Simmons, Leary served as Director of Residence Life from 1978-1984 and as Associate Dean from 1984-1985. She also served as Clerk of the Corporation and undertook her role as Vice President in 1988.

Carol Leary played a significant role at Simmons and we wish her the best of luck at Bay Path.

Carol Leary's contributions to the Simmons community were many and she will surely be missed as she leaves her role as Vice-President to preside over Bay Path College.

"My greatest memory of Carol Leary was her financially helping students out of her own pocket. I saw that on a number of occasions throughout my six years working with her."

Cathy Black, Assistant Director of Annual Funds

"I shall always recall and cherish her enthusiastic support for the college's community service endeavors and her personal commitment to human and social service."

Stephen London, Chair of Sociology

"During a time when I was unsure [about my major] she was really able to put a few perspectives in my mind of which direction I might want to go. She also gave me the assurance that I still had time to decide -- that it was better to wait it out and know what I wanted to do rather than take something that I didn't like. "

Violet Markowski, '95

"I have no idea how she seems to remember the names of each of the students she meets, but it is evident they hold her in high regard for such an impressionable feat. It was not surprising to see her at Women's Talent Night in Quadside, watching the parade of Femme Day participants stroll down the hallway, or calling security at 6:00 am to let a student into Evans Hall to awaken the sleeping beauties with the traditional trumpet reveille on May Day."

Becky Dominguez, '95

"Carol invited me to have a cup of coffee to talk about grad school -- three days before she left! I met her at 7:00 am in the President's Office and, as she walked down the hall, she personally greeted everyone she saw, from the Fens staff to administrators to students. She also turned on the lights all along the hallway and taught me the secret!"

Things have changed at Simmons since the time that students in the class of 1995 were first filling out their college applications, touring Simmons, and making their decisions to attend school here.

Undergraduate students once had the option of living in North or Morse Halls before LIFE students became a part of the Simmons community and North Hall became housing for graduate students only.

Mail was once delivered to the bell desk in each residence hall. Bell desk workers were responsible for sorting mail, calling students to announce guests, ensuring that guests were escorted and signing for deliveries. While the bell desks were the center of activity, what is currently the mail room in Bartol Hall was a lounge area with couches and tables.

Bartol Hall and the dining services at Simmons have gone through many changes. Students were once required to be on the full 18 meal plan. There were no bagged lunches but the deli bar was open during breakfast so that students could make their own lunches.

Along with members of the class of 1995 Daka first came to Simmons in 1991. With them Daka brought many changes to the Bartol menu. The frozen yogurt and fresh-baked bread are just two of the things that were added. Ice-cream was formerly only available on Sundays until the addition of the ice-cream freezer.

Students were once able to enter the library through the library doors. Checking out books used to mean filling out individual book cards for each book. The gates that closed off Beatley's circulation and reference desks were put there in 1993. The library used to open earlier, close later, and have extended hours during exams. The classrooms in the library used to be much larger; many of them were divided in half during various holiday breaks.

The Fens didn't always accept points from Simmons ID's. Students used to have to pay cash for all their food purchased in the Fens.

Each student used to have keys to the front door of her dorm. The magnetic strip on ID's were only used in Bartol. The ID's were thicker and each student got a new one each year.

The Simmons parking lot used to have tennis courts in the middle of it that were torn down to make room for more parking.

Security officers, who used to be called guards, escorted students by foot to the Beatley Library and Museum T stop on 15 minute interval schedules. This was before security had their escort van, which just this year was replaced.

Simmons once offered classes in Geology and Astronomy, according to the course catalog.

Some of the residence halls used to have ivy growing on the walls. The southside corner of Simmons Hall once had a tree that branched over the Quad and there was also a row of shrubbery along the path between Simmons and Morse Halls. There also used to be a row of shrubbery underneath the Simmons Hall balcony that faces the quad.

The Activities Programming Board used to have showings of current films in Alumnae Hall every week.

Simmons College had always had a male president until Jean Dowdall became the first female president here.

The "Administration" used to be defined as William Holmes, Carol Leary and Charlotte Morocco, with Anne Coghlan, Charles Mackey and John Robinson supervising academics.

The cool Simmons hangouts were The Cask 'n Flagon and Who's on First. Landsdowne Street was just the back alley of Fenway Park.

Visitors at the MCB were greeted with a bowl of candy at the Information desk; the Bookstore staff embraced the spirit of Halloween by dressing in costume and serving complementary treats.

Things within Simmons were not the only things to change. When the class of 1995 first entered college, Desert Storm was covering the headlines, George Bush was still in office and people were complaining because the price of postage stamps was going up to 29 cents. Clarence Thomas was being accused of sexual misconduct by Anita Hill. People mourned the loss of Michael Landon, Dr. Suess, and Jim Henson.

Left : Contrary to what some may believe, commuter students are not an isolated group. Here are some members of the CSO, along with students from other organizations, at the Fall Leadership Retreat.

Morse Hall

Above: Morse Hall houses students from the Language Institute for English (LIFE). These two seem to think that living at Simmons is a blast.

Upper: Since LIFE students stay for one month intervals, Morse Hall always seems to have people moving in and out.

Lower: Why do these three look like they're up to something?

Right: Living in a residence hall with people from all over the world provides all kinds of opportunities to learn about other cultures. Even just hanging around in the lounge can be a learning experience.

North Hall

Issues Representative: Carrie Cutillo

Above : Alexis Bishop looks stunned. Maybe she's lost her wall behind all those pictures. It's got to be there somewhere.

Above: Christine Cenard isn't quite sure what to do next. With all the things to do in Boston, making that decision can often be a tough one. There's always places to go, activities to participate in, and usually assignments to be done.

Above : Sophomore Amber Crenetz pauses for a minute at the Smith Hall bell desk. Did you forget any of your shopping, Amber?

South Hall

Right: Hall Treasurer Josette Castelucci shows a freshman the ups and downs of South Hall.

Below: Hall President Lang Downing takes a minute to read "The Procrastinator's Creed." You wouldn't be trying to waste time, now would you, Lang?

Multicultural Organizations

The Asian Student Organization works to unify the Asian students at Simmons and to expose the community to aspects of Asian culture by maintaining contacts with Asian students at other schools and assisting in services for the improvement and welfare of the Boston Asian community.

The Black Student Organization promotes interest, utility, and self pride within the Black community at Simmons. The BSO serves as an educational source planning programs such as KWANZAA and Black History Month. They also participate with other schools in dances, mixers, and other social activities.

The Hellenic Association serves to unite Simmons students and faculty who share Hellenic ancestry by fostering a sense of fellowship and working to enlighten the Simmons community with the culture, history, and beauty of Greece.

Hispanis Unidas works to create unity among the Hispanic community at Simmons and aims to increase the cultural awareness of the entire community.

The International Student Organization fosters a spirit of internationalism on campus by bringing together international students with the goal of organizing and conducting activities that encourage this spirit.

The Lesbian and Bisexual Association is a social and political organization for lesbians, bisexuals, and supporters of their rights which provides a safe environment for the expression of human diversity while respecting confidentiality.

Below: Jessica Tran, treasurer of the Asian Student Association.

Expressing Our Faith

Below: Catholic Student Organization President Melissa Chern and Hillel President Marci Frank set a good example of how members of different faiths can get along.

The Catholic Student Organization works to meet the needs of Catholic students, as well as students of other faiths, by addressing issues ranging from religion to relationships. The CSO planned All Souls Day and Ash Wednesday services, as well as two weekend retreats.

The Christian Fellowship provides a loving, supportive atmosphere to grow in the knowledge of Jesus Christ. Meetings serve for Bible study and prayer to become closer to God.

Hillel is geared toward uniting Simmons's Jewish students. By planning and participating in cultural, educational, athletic and religious activities, students can sustain or develop their Jewish identities. Hillel has sponsored events ranging from Shabbat dinners to a Holocaust survivor speaker to dances with other colleges and a night out at Boston Billiards.

Political Activism

Amnesty International is a world wide organization that works to end world misery through activities such as human rights awareness days, educational programs, guest speakers, and events in association with other local groups. The Feminist Union acts as a support group for the many women who confront oppression in their lives and want to share experiences by taking direct action on women's issues.

The Model United Nations familiarizes students with the facets of a selected nation and information surrounding its position on specific UN issues by participating in simulated UN activities with students around the world.

Voice for the Voiceless seeks to promote a greater respect and reverence for the value of human life in all stages by educating and informing the community about abortion and its alternatives.

Theatrical Society

The Theatrical Society brings together students with an interest in theatrical performance and production. Students become involved in both the on-stage and backstage factors that go into creating a successful production. Specializing in productions with numerous female roles, the Society has worked with theater students from neighboring campuses to perform live theater at Simmons. Students of all class standings and levels of theatrical experience are encouraged to participate. This years productions were Agnes of God and The Odd Couple.

Above Right: Members of the Theatrical Society brought the play Agnes of God to life in Alumnae Hall.

Dance Club

The Dance Club is one of the newest organizations here at Simmons. It offers students the opportunity to get together and practice different forms of dance, while working to encourage the community to enjoy it's beauty.

Chorale and Sirens

Chorale is a select group that performs frequently at both the College and around New England. Its repertoire varies widely and ranges from light works to master works performed with professional orchestras, soloists and men's choruses. Sirens, the a cappella singing group, perform at institutional and private functions alone and with men's, women's and coed groups from other schools to raise money to travel and record.

All-Campus Programming

The Activities Programming Board is the organization responsible for a major portion of the events and activities brought to campus. Members gain experience in event planning and budgeting for lectures, feature films series, travel, performing arts, educational/community service projects, block ticket sales, and the annual Spring Spree and Winter Weekends.

Quadside Committee is responsible for programming and publicizing weekly Thursday night entertainment at Quadside Cafe for the Simmons community.

Events have included everything from live blues and rock bands to comedy and coffeehouse.

Above: The Quadside staff prepares for its opening. Make sure there are plenty of nachos!

Right: APB members, Bonni-Jo Bouchard, Lena Abu Shaben, Veasha Hubert, Nicole Walcott, Latasha Washington, Mary Elizabeth Mullen, Trelane Clark, Kelly Purcell and Nicole Young, pose for the camera! Could it be all the great events they've got planned that make them all look so happy?

Below: Quadside committee members make sure everyone will have a wristband.

Lower Right: Latasha Washington and Trelane Clark laugh as a silly moment breaks up a meeting of the Activities Programming Board.

NACA

As institutional members of National Association for Campus Activities, Simmons students are provided with the opportunity to learn leadership and programming skills, interact with other college programming boards, and review new performers on behalf of their campus through regional conferences and workshops.

Left: Latasha Washington and Trelane Clark still found time between the conferences to joke around.

Lower Left: Good times and laughter seemed to be everywhere at the NACA conference.

Below: Members of Quadside committee seemed to be having a great time!

Simmons Outreach

The Debate Club exercises the art of forensics at the intercollegiate level. The Outing Club gives students the opportunity to travel outside the city and enjoy the New England wilderness through hiking, mountain-climbing, and other excursions.

Simmons Community Outreach acts as a liaison to help students who are looking for opportunities to volunteer in the Boston community.

The Student Alumnae Association works directly with alumnae to plan activities that foster communication and spirit between students and alumnae.

The Transfer Liaison is comprised of former transfer students who work to make new transfers comfortable at Simmons through January Orientation and other activities throughout the year. Women in Communications, Inc. (WICI) is a nationally associated organization that serves as a professional resource for students majoring in or interested in the field of communications.

Student Government Association

The purpose of the Student Government Association is to encourage responsibility and cooperation in democratic self-government. It is concerned with representation on all levels of the college. It coordinates the policies of various student organizations and works to further the general interests of the student body.

Academic Liaisons

Academic Liaisons are composed of students in different departments interested in that department. They serve as social and resource groups where students can discuss the concerns of their studies and department. Together with faculty and staff, they sponsor social and educational activities that relate to their concentration. Membership to each liaison is open to both concentrators in the field and anyone who just holds an interest in the area. The activities sponsored by liaisons include everything from movie nights to job-hunting workshops to field trips.

The recognized department liaisons at Simmons are:

Art & Music Liaison	Foreign Language Liaison	Philosophy Liaison
Biology Liaison	History Liaison	Physical Therapy Liaison
Chemistry Liaison	International Relations Liaison	Political science Liaison
Communications Liaison	Management Liaison	Pre-med Liaison
Economics Liaison	Mathematics Liaison	Prince Retail Liaison
Education Liaison	Music Liaison	Psychology Liaison
English Liaison	Nursing Liaison	Sociology Liaison
	Nutrition Liaison

Left: Co-President of the Economics Liaison, Crystal Stevens, and other Liaison members got the opportunity to chat with alumnae and professors during faculty teas and career nights that the group sponsored.

Above: Experiment demonstrations are just one of the activities sponsored by the Chemistry Liaison. Here students seem to be looking on attentively.

Leadership Retreat

Nearly 90 new and experienced student leaders formed new friendships and exercised new skills at Briarwood Retreat Center on Cape Cod, September 16-17, 1994. Though the retreat was only 24 hours long, participants continued to refer to it as "the weekend," and recommended to retreat planners that a two-day retreat might be in order for the future. Members of the Student Life Division began planning the retreat in the summer, preparing experiential exercises which simulated real-life experiences in student organizations. "Briarwood University" placed students in imaginary campus organizations and demonstrated how apparently different groups can find common projects; "Owl Island" challenged participants to test their skills as planners, coordinators, and communicators (or in this case biologists and physicists). There was even an opportunity for teams to compete on their knowledge of the Simmons Community and their college's history. But all was not hard work -- it was, after all, a retreat. This year's student leaders will long remember cabins vs. Carriage House, the spooky haunted Main House, the catering line that fed the wrong way, campfire songs, World Championship Outburst, Dean Jordan's Game Boy, freeze tag, bus ride bingo, the defective dart gun, cookies, cookies, cookies, and other stories they wouldn't even tell us!

Above: Pam Fitzgerald, Paula Nicole Burns, Becky Bennett, Mitone Mendezona warm up and hot chocolate in the living

Student Publications And Media

Microcosm provides students with the opportunity to take an active part in the production of the yearbook. Involved in all aspects from creating layouts to selling ad space, students work together to produce a successful yearbook.

Sidelines, Simmon's literary magazine, serves as a creative outlet containing poetry, prose, photography, and artwork by students and staff. Published twice a year, it offers firsthand experience for those interested in literature, editing, and magazine production.

The Simmons News, written and produced entirely by students, serves as an important, reliable source of information for the Simmons community every week.

Above: Nicole Burns, Paula Ribiero, and Hannah Bordas are busy proofing stories and layouts for Simmons News.

Simmons students have no excuse for not staying in shape with all that the Holmes Sports Center has to offer. Students can work off the stress of academic life by running on the 100 meter track, shooting hoops on one of the basketball courts, or playing a game of squash on the indoor courts. The center also has two weight rooms, an indoor pool and sauna, a cardiovascular workout room with bikes, treadmills, stairmasters, and the latest in fitness equipment. The dance studio provides both a place for those interested in dance to practice and for people to aerobicize. Classes in aerobics as well as those that familiarize students and faculty with other aspects of the Holmes Sports Center are offered. Students are also able to get lifeguard certification without having to leave campus.

CLASS OF 1996

The best thing about being a junior is...

"It's more than half-way over.
The end is near."

- Amy Sheeley

"That I get to be a senior next year!"

-Sherry Suprenant

Below: Holly Ruth and Kate Mulcahy show just how happy they are to be juniors. Mark my words, here they look like they're having a blast in Alumnae Hall.

CLASS OF 1997

The best thing about being a sophomore is...

"You actually know Boston now." -Amber Crenetz

"You know your way around the school. You know your professors." -Racquel Callender

"You're not a freshman anymore!" - Heather Bayliss

Lower Right: Being a sophomore gives you the opportunity to help freshmen get acquainted with Simmons. One way to do this is by working on an Orientation committee. It's funny to think how just the year before it was you who were unfamiliar with Simmons, the campus and the community.

Left: Erin Clements, one of the Resident Advisors in South, looks surprised by the camera.

Below: Sometimes it can seem like you spend your whole life in the lab, especially when you have the course-load of a sophomore Science concentrator.

CLASS OF 1998

The best thing about being a freshman is...

"You can act really dumb and get away with it!"

-Nicole St. Clair

Above: Sure, moving in may seem like fun when you're a freshman, but just wait until your fourth year of it! That smile may fade away after a few more dozen flights of stairs.

Above: What are you looking at?

Right: Your first year at college can be filled with many memories; the Valentine's Ball may just be one of the many activities that you can look back upon.
